About the NS Collections & Galleries

NS Collections & Galleries

Nevada State University's Office for the Arts was founded in 2014. Its first initiative, The Campus as Museum, aspired to make art accessible for all by featuring the work of Nevada artists on every floor of every building at the university. Since then, the Office for the Arts has added the Thalia Dondero Gallery and other galleries across campus for temporary exhibitions.

The Thalia Dondero Gallery is located on the second floor of the Glenn and Ande Christenson Education Building. You can find it and the other NS Galleries on the map. Be sure to check the University's event calendar for art receptions and exhibition dates. Parking at Nevada State University is free.

Visitor Guidelines

While touring the NS Collections & Galleries, you are welcome to take photographs and video for personal, noncommercial use. Flash, lights, tripods, and selfie-sticks are prohibited. Occasionally a "no photography" symbol may be found by a work of art or at the entrance to an exhibition that prohibits photography.

For your safety and the safety of the artwork, please stay at least 12 inches away from the artwork, and do not touch, climb, or modify indoor and outdoor sculptures in any way. There's one exception to this rule, we invite you to participate in our tradition of taking your photo while standing in the claws of Scorpion by Ramón Sanchez. You can find the sculpture on the plaza near the Rogers Students Center. Nevada State University alums tell us that touching Scorpion's claw will bring you good luck!

Request a guided tour by contacting us at TheArts@nevadastate.edu or 702-992-2380. To ensure we can accommodate your group, we ask that you submit your tour request at least two weeks in advance of your preferred date.
